

SJSU Cares helps students meet their basic needs

The SJSU Cares program provides students who lack basic needs, such as food and housing insecurity, with the opportunity to housing and food access. Students can have their problems heard and seek future solutions. Similar to a signpost, SJSU Cares helps inform and direct students to resources that they may not know on campus.

Students can schedule meetings with Marko Mohlenhoff, the student affairs case manager for SJSU Cares. He's available Monday to Friday in the Financial Aid & Scholarship Office in the Student Services Center, with meetings usually lasting an hour. Students are expected to take advantage of all of the existing financial resources available to them, such as student loans and grants before pursuing other resources.

Listed below are some of the resources that SJSU Cares can connect students with. Students can set up a meeting or find out more details at sjsu.edu/sjsucares.
